The human Oskar (hOSK) protein is the founding member of a small class of post-translational modifiers of gene transcription. In humans, Oskar's function is required for embryogenesis. In Drosophila, Oskar plays an essential role in female meiosis. Despite the essential nature of Oskar in Drosophila, its specific functions, or sub-cellular localizations, are poorly understood. We have used a tagged version of hOSK to investigate its sub-cellular distribution in Drosophila. We show that hOSK is constitutively expressed in developing embryos and in ovarian follicle cells. In addition, in the follicle cells, we show that the tagged hOSK protein is selectively retained in the nuclear compartment of the cells. Our data suggests that this intranuclear retention is mediated by interactions with the nuclear envelope. These nuclear retention functions of Oskar protein are dependent on the tyrosine kinase activity of the Src homology (SH) 2 domain of the Oskar protein.Lovato family The Lovato family was a clan of the nobility of Tuscany in the Italian region of central Italy, extending through the Val di Taro in Tuscany and the Val di Mugno in Piedmont, Italy, who served as governors for the Republic of Siena from the end of the 12th century until the end of the 16th century. The first of the house were belonging to the house of Altoviti family. In the Val di Mugno the family is associated with the Hypatia dynasty of Tuscany. Giovanni Benci di Altoviti, the founder of the family, along with his brothers Giovanni II and Gherardo supported the Pisan Revolt in the 11th century. The Tescio family also supported Pisan rebels in the 11th century. In the 12th century, the house was appointed administrator of the Val di Taro. In the 14th century, Giovanni III, brother of the poet Ariosto, became member of the commune of Siena, but in 1451, was killed by order of the
