number of programming languages use the acronym ACC for their native database file format, Microsoft Access file format is also denoted ACCA or ACC. Automation is also used in a more general sense to refer to functionality in a software package that automates actions not usually performed by a human. For example, the phrase "user-friendly", when used to describe a software package, refers to the ability of the software package to make the user's tasks as easy and efficient as possible. In this sense, Automation is a general term, sometimes applied to the control of other phenomena as well, including systems of machinery, e.g., in computer programming, automation may refer to the use of a computer program. See also AutoCAD for a software package that is often referred to by its acronym ACC in analogy to MS Access COM+
