I'm already using $this->redirect('/index', 'hello'); but the problem is when I go to my website, I will have to hit back(I remember when I was on Facebook some time ago, it will be redirecting me to the exact URL that I had requested before closing the page). How can I make it redirect me to the exact URL? A: This is what solved my problem: $this->redirect($this->request->get('_route')); Instead of just $this->redirect('/index'); it redirects me to the URL which I requested when I made the GET request. It's open to the public and people buy and sell quilts to create a huge community feeling of quilt-related stuff. This year, I wasn't planning on attending. I'm not a huge quilt show person. Well, this year I made a quilt. I've got some other quilts to share, but that one is definitely getting it's moment in the spotlight. There was another quilter (a much better quilter than me, from what I can tell) who was selling some of her quilts at this show. As it turns out, she and I are both learning quilting in the same class, so we hit it off and had a lot of fun talking about
