I remember reading a novel back in the 80's that was about a teenage boy who, on his seventeenth birthday, is granted the opportunity to become an alien spaceship pilot. The book is told from the viewpoint of the boy, and I remember the chapter where he learns that he has been chosen to be a pilot because of his skill in the use of computers. There are scenes in which he is instructed in the use of a keyboard by an alien. I think I read this one in the UK. A: Could this be The Hunted World by A S Maury? Convicted of a gruesome murder, a space pilot known as "The Hunted" finds a new life in his world-of-the-future virtual reality. It was released in 1981 (it was turned into a movie in 1983) but it was originally written in 1978. (And a comment reader points out that it was released in the UK as The Savoy: "from the savoy entertainment pub in st. John's Wood", which seems to be the same publisher as your description.)
