WINDOWS is a registered trademark of Microsoft Corporation in the United States and/or other countries. On July 21, 2018, Microsoft announced that support for Windows XP, 32-bit on x86-compatible hardware had been discontinued,[2] and as of March 8, 2020, Microsoft no longer produces any security updates or fixes for the system.[3] Microsoft stated that those who have such legacy computers would receive three years of free phone support, but had to pay for security updates after that time.[2] The continued existence of the operating system is required for support of installed hardware including docking stations and other peripherals, as well as being required for downloading certain legacy applications for use on modern versions of Windows. Although some viruses and malware will still function on Windows XP, its design complexity, and the lack of newer security features, make it a less attractive target than later versions of Windows, for example the XP support offered by Microsoft ends at April 8, 2020, which is a year later than other versions of Windows 10 and Win 8 and it also has no support for Windows 7. For example, malware designed to target Windows XP were able to bypass certain security measures not available in later versions of Windows.[4] Windows Xp Sp3 Loader By 86 Help by User(???) on May 11, 2011 12:51. You don't need to buy it just make sure your motherboard supports the Windows XP professional. If you have got a Windows XP Home which is a 32-bit operating system, you won't have any problem with it, but if you have got a 32-bit x86 operating system, then you cannot activate it without a Windows XP professional as a hardware driver. For example, a 32-bit operating system such as Windows XP Home is not capable of 3da54e8ca3
