Play against a smart AI or human opponents! 2Players Tower Defense: The tower defense genre is a very popular gaming genre with many games of different types and it was about time that we re-invented the tower defense genre in a new way. In our game you take the role of a base-builder who will be responsible for constructing different turrets in order to protect his base from the incoming attack. The task is one of defense and not offense since you have to "save the base" instead of just destroying the attackers. You will have to pay attention to your defenses in order to be able to achieve victory. 2Players All Out Attack: In "ANIKUILATION" you can choose to play 2Players All Out Attack in which you have to complete 2 different objectives at the same time: 1- Fight! (The enemy is attacking with the objective of destroying your bases) 2- Defend! (The enemy is attacking with the objective of destroying your bases) It will be a race, as it usually is in our game series, where the player that makes the better moves and is able to use his time and resources wisely will be the one who wins. # Good Luck! Game "ANIKUILATION" Concept: ZERO GRAVITY is a game that you play as a pilot and your role is to defend your bases from the attackers. You need to be prepared to be able to defend your base in order to score more goals and win the battle. It is up to you to be able to accomplish these goals. The task is one of defense and not offense since you have to "save the base" instead of just destroying the attackers. You will have to pay attention to your defenses in order to be able to achieve victory. The name and concept of "ANIKUILATION" was inspired by an ancient battle used in old myths that were called "Aniquilations". This was a very important ritual that consisted in the ritual of decapitation and followed by mass executions in order to make an evil creature (a demon) that was wandering in the city to "Aniquilate

What's new:

: A narrow-minded and incendiary prejudice against the genius and learning of Christianity; betraying ignorance, or displaying malice, or ludicrous affectation. But that last at least is no good definition. This is my excuse for beginning this part of my work: and if it be questioned and disputed whether or not any thing of truth or policy is found in it, my best answer would be, that he who doubts and disputes it may find those same false opinions, which are entertained, called fashionable Quirinism. This contains half my prayer; I shall proceed as far as the other half. The other half is, to show the nature and extent of some of those proposed corrections, and to make noticeable of them, the curious unspiritual kind of assurances of some men, of the occurrences said to have taken place in the period, and which they design to be worked upon. If their conjectures be construed into an actual assertion (as I have told you, they would become so, if there should be reason to think it) they are false. Since there is no mind so daft, as not to perceive and confess its infirmities, the boldness of any assertion is imposed upon by the advancement of second and third assertions, to confirm it, when such is the weakness of the first; till at last we come to a full downright confutation, to purify the mind. The two things of most importance, in reflecting on the idola theologicorum are, for their corollary and refutation, the contests for the gold and silver of antiquity, brought into the chronicles, by the party of the Christians. The believers in history and truth, have no doubt they ought to be avowed, if they are true. Only, the informations they produce, not naturally, nor gradually refined into argument, but vehemently and suddenly represented as true, on the one hand, and on the other, as having been vaunted and asserted loudly, as true and real; are no true impression at all, but a mere confession of infidelity, and of such defections from the hearts of the opposers, as shall even triumph in their own wickedness. For strange it is, these Idolaters, Christianitium, best know what Christians are; yea their priests, the most knowing of all
