for Firefighters With more wildland fires occurring than normal and more and more firefighters entering the field, the LEAP Foundation has again partnered with California Academy of Sciences and the National Science Foundation to support scientific research to find solutions to protect firefighters and the communities they serve. LEAP has committed to providing $250,000, through an award from the National Science Foundation, to support three groundbreaking research projects. Growth and warming of Earth's oceans could dramatically increase risk of wildfires, especially in California, but this is still an area of active research. Fire captain wins $100,000 for his PhD A captain in the San Bernardino Fire Department has been awarded $100,000 in grant money for a PhD in the environmental science field.

James Larson, battalion chief in Borrego Springs and research investigator at UC Riverside, received the prestigious America the Beautiful Fellowship Award for excellence in research during his graduate program at California State University, which offers an 18-month fellowship based on funding from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the National Science Foundation and other federal agencies. Larson's research is focusing on the complex interactions that occur among human and natural ecosystems.

One project involves fire management strategies and water management practices. MGM is resurrecting the original half-hour comedy series for a fourth season on

Hulu, Deadline reports. MGM, which owns series creator 648931e174
