Video games Beginning with the release of AutoCAD 2010, Autodesk used to provide a 2D game titled AutoCAD 2010: Power Up! for several platforms: Windows, Windows Mobile, Mac OS X and Linux. iOS version of the game has been removed in late 2013, but the Mac and PC versions remain available as freeware. Other products During 2013, the company has been criticized by some for excessive late payments to independent content creators. Many were forced to close their businesses, and hundreds of small businesses have been affected. Some content creators have blamed the company for pushing forward with its licensing model, despite criticism and threats of the European Union to have the company's EU license revoked, and the revocation of its license from the United States. A formal response by Autodesk was issued on 13 February 2013, apologising for any negative impact on the community, and offering compensation for the small number of businesses affected, and a formal apology from CEO Carl Bass. The EU has since approved the use of AutoCAD in its territory, but Autodesk's US license was revoked in February 2014. The Windows and OS X versions of AutoCAD Architecture, AutoCAD Electrical and AutoCAD Civil 3D are sold as part of the bundles of packages with CAD software, with free access to all product components including the software. In 2012, Autodesk invested $37 million for a 56% stake in the Cloud Imperium Games. Is it time to take action? In 1972 a nationwide conversation took place regarding the U.S. constitution. The conversation continued to the present day, with scholars, activists and people all across the country continually contributing their thoughts and ideas regarding this monumental document. Since 1972, U.S. citizens have been debating whether or not the U.S. government is acting in the best interests of the citizens of the United States. This debate has shaped the world that we live in today. The last three decades have seen extraordinary amounts of new regulations and legislation introduced by our federal government. This legislation and regulation has been put in place to protect our rights as U.S. citizens, yet it has led to the erosion of our freedoms. Our individual rights have been undermined and our freedom has been taken away. During the early 1900s many Americans got caught up in the hysteria of a new political movement. The early Progressive Movement brought about many positive changes in society. Due to their efforts, the United States would gain universal literacy, eliminate child labor, and provide government assistance to the poor. These changes to society would lead to increased prosperity and prosperity would allow for an increase in leisure time. It was also the early 1900s when the concept of an activist government started to gain more influence. Now, over a century later, the balance of power has been tipped. Activists in government have started to dictate what is best for the people. They dictate what kind of medical treatment we will be allowed and whether or not we will be able to hunt, fish or do other things that are very important to our survival and quality of life. The key to our survival as a nation is to be able to control our own destiny. This includes being able to determine the types of regulations that are put into place to regulate how we live and what we do. As a nation, we should be able to decide how we want to live and what regulations will help us to do so. We as citizens need to have the right to determine our own destiny. The time has come for the people to take action. It is time to stand up for our individual rights. It is time to stand up and let our government know that we are sick and tired of being made to suffer from legislation that does not serve us. It is time to let our representatives know that we are fed up with being forced into a world that we do not agree with. It is time for people to speak out and get involved in what
