Basically, there are a lot of changes in the dependencies of the `jdk-8u43-linux-amd64-signed.jar` file like few missing jars as you pointed out and also some system related reasons. In this case, the solution is to manually add those jars to your project.

By the way, you might also have to reconfigure your existing project to use the new jars.

A draft audit by the Trump administration of the U.S. Postal Service's use of automation in logistics and other areas has revealed that the USPS has lost "a substantial" amount of money due to improper payments over the past five years. The memo from the Postal Service Board of Governors, published Tuesday, indicates that the USPS has paid too much money as a result of a range of issues related to automation, including contract sign-ups, inaccurate document ID numbers, and more. The memo comes as Congress considers the fate of a $5.5 billion operating fund for USPS and as the Postal Service considers whether to make major changes to its business and operating model. In an accompanying letter to the board, the general counsel of the agency said the loss of some $1.6 billion over the past five years could be attributed to improper payments. The audit notes that USPS has been grappling with a longstanding problem of the federal government inappropriately reimbursing the Postal Service for the costs of returning to sender mail and other services, regardless of the agency's policy or the specific situation. The letter characterizes this as a problem that has been "festering" for some years. But the letter from the general counsel goes into some additional detail on the issue, and paints a picture of a much more serious and systemic problem with USPS. In particular, the letter points to the agency's use of contract services to provide certain postal operations—in some cases, USPS has simply outsourced functions for which the Postal Service has traditionally provided the service directly in-house. Further, the letter highlights other problems, including a large number of inactive and vacated contracts, and changes in a number of the contracts USPS has entered into during the past five years. “USPS cannot be sure that the contract changes it made over the past five years were appropriate,” the letter states. The problems documented in the letter are intertwined. At issue is that USPS has outsourced a wide range of non-
