Q: What is the correct usage of the word "Beautiful" to describe a picture? When I was looking for the word beautiful for a directory of images, I found a picture as an example of beautiful. But I'm not exactly sure whether it should be beautiful picture or beautiful picture is a picture. Also it makes no sense to me that beautiful picture is a picture. But I think I have heard somebody said it. A: beautiful 1. Describes something that is worth attention because it is pretty, pretty good, or good in some other way. 2. Describes something that is pleasing to the eye, as an area of nature, a painting, or a photograph. 3. When you describe yourself as being beautiful, you say that you are very attractive or good-looking. A: It is considered an adjective and thus used as a predicate with a noun as subject. In this case, "beautiful picture" means that it is a picture that is considered to be beautiful. In the typical situation for this usage, the noun is the object of the adjective and not the subject. When you describe yourself as being beautiful, you say that you are very attractive or good-looking. For example:
