"Players move like real players, collide as real players, and react as real players do – this is the next evolution of FIFA gameplay," said David Rutter, Executive Producer of FIFA on Xbox One. "We've created the most responsive, authentic and immersive gameplay experience of any football simulation to date. This is a game you'll need to keep your hands on the ball because you'll be struggling to keep it away from the players and your opponents." FIFA 22 introduces "First Person View," which adds an enhanced perspective that lets gamers walk around and scout the pitch while watching the game in real time. Players also have a deeper insight into their squad during training sessions thanks to the new "Tactical Report." In-depth player development comes from the new game engine, which adds innovation and realism to the way players are represented. The new engine has been built on the new FIFA-Next Gen technology and technology learned from the FIFA development cycle during its 23 years. FIFA 22 also introduces live 3D match views that allow gamers to watch the match from any angle to capture the action from the pitch. The camera can be moved, zoomed in and out of the action with the touch of a button, and players can also switch between classic 4:3 and 16:9 widescreen formats. FIFA 22 introduces a number of gameplay features, including: Improved control: New control schemes and improved gameflow allow gamers to respond quicker and react to the situation at hand. New-Player-Friendly Controls: FIFA 22 features five new controls that make it easy for new and casual football fans to jump into the game. New Player Development: Every player has improved attributes and a new level of detail. Smarter AI: AI reflects the real world and puts the ball in the right spot. Bigger, more diverse, more responsive pitch: The pitch now offers variations from traditional grass to fully playable dirt. Simulated Kit Changes: New kits and new player looks increase the diversity and style of the game. Upsides of the New Engine: New visuals, animations, control options, responsive gameplay, and new audio technologies make FIFA 22 the most realistic football simulation available. FIFA 2K Magic: The following features are powered by the new game engine: FIFA 2K Magic
