Yes, Sprintbit File Manager is a linux based app. You can find "Filemanager" app for linux based platform. no comments on these comments? ok... Edit... I don't see the purpose of the fake reviews. I don't need a file manager, I have one already. I don't want a file manager, I have one already. This seems like a waste of time. I will continue searching for an actual comment. Hey @Gigabyte User - your reviews are really a waste of time. It's not funny to use random apps in place of something like Defender to secure your device. You are only trying to make a mock review. Android is safer than Windows. I agree. Definitely. But it still needs an antivirus for 3 reasons: 1. To scan what you download, 2. To scan what you download, 3. To block malware. Doesn't work under Linux Yep. It's a buggy app that doesn't have a Linux port, yet. Thus, it sucks. Hey @Gigabyte User - your reviews are really a waste of time.
