The grant was immediately south of Rancho Arroyo de la Alameda. The grant extended along the south side of the River of the Same Name to the Rancho Arroyo de la Alameda, then continued northeast to California Creek, which drains into the San Joaquin River. History Perez and Valencia (1829–1875) came to California in the 1830s as part of Antonio Maria Lugo's band, and settled on lands that are now part of San José, California. With the cession of California to the United States following the Mexican-American War, the 1848 Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo provided that the land grants would be honored. As required by the Land Act of 1851, a claim for Rancho El Cielo was filed with the Public Land Commission in 1852, and the grant was patented to Perez and Valencia in 1875. Between 1850 and 1853, Alexander Campbell of the Rancho Sisquoc grant and part of Rancho Murieta was the owner of Rancho El Cielo. [An]Pregnancy and vaginal delivery following maternal cervical disc replacement surgery: a case series. Cervical discectomy, cervical disc replacement, and anterior cervical fusion are common and preferred procedures in the management of severe degenerative pathology (eg, myelopathy, radiculopathy, and nerve root compression) of the cervical spine. In view of the success and safety of cervical fusion in patients with multilevel degenerative pathology, the use of cervical intervertebral disc replacement, perhaps to replace the need for fusion surgery, has increased recently. The main focus of this study has been to report the possible occurrence of subsequent pregnancy and childbirth with cervical intervertebral disc replacement. A total of 20 intervertebral disc replacements has been performed by the senior authors between July 2011 to June 2014. Patient charts were reviewed. There were 15 women with cervical intervertebral disc replacement and one with cervical disk replacement and cervical fusion. All the patients had a successful pregnancy and vaginal delivery. Three patients had cord compression for cervical aorta and one she had numbness over both hands. Three patients complained of recurrent leg pain with mild walking difficulties. Radiologically, three patients had implant extrusion but none were symptomatic. One patient noted muscle spasm and short leg weakness one week after delivery. Despite some short term adverse effects from surgery, natural pregnancy and subsequent
