My attempt follows, but it throws an exception: ReferenceError: myColumns is not defined if(colModel[myColumns].minLength == 1) { ... }

At that point in the code, colModel is defined in a prior line. How can I fix this? A: Each element of colModel is of type object. You need to check like if(colModel[myColumns] && colModel[myColumns].minLength == 1) { … } A feasibility study of transurethral ectopic sphincterotomy for urethral stricture and recurrence following urethroplasty. To evaluate the effectiveness of transurethral ectopic sphincterotomy for urethral stricture and recurrence after urethroplasty. Thirty-six patients with urethral stricture after urethroplasty or after repeated dilatations were prospectively assessed for a possible transurethral ectopic sphincterotomy. A total of 45 sphincterotomies were performed. The mean age of the patients was 57.8 (range 27-71) years. All operations were uneventful. After a median follow-up of 26 (range 6-48) months, 40 of 45 (89%) procedures were successful. As a result of stricture recurrence in 5 (11%) cases, a total of 10 (22%) cases underwent secondary urethroplasty. In all of them, the mean age of the patients was 60 (range 52-68) years. With the mean age of the patients and the mean follow-up of 27.7 months, the success rate of the secondary procedures was 70%. Transurethral ectopic sphincter [Ca2+]o than at lower [Ca2+]o. This is generally believed to result in accumulation of intracellular Na+ and reduction of the resting membrane potential. However, this effect is found only at [Ca2+]o less than or equal to 100 nM. At higher [Ca2+]o, the decrease in potential is not predicted by the interaction between Ca2+ and Na+ on the Na+ pump, since Na+ is transported two to three times more effectively in the presence of millimolar Ca2+ than in its absence. Furthermore, tracings of sodium currents vs. membrane voltage show that when [Ca2+]o is reduced from 1.1 to 0.1 mM, the pump inactivation is unaffected by Ca2+. We propose that the primary effect of intracellular Ca2+ is to suppress Na(+)-Ca2+ exchange in skeletal muscle. The most probable physiological implication is a decrease in the rate of fatigue of the Na(+)-Ca2+ exchange system. At lower [Ca2+]o, Ca2+ could be acting by either a direct or an indirect action.U.S.A.
