The days are becoming darker for today's photographers: In the EOS 600D, the Intelligent Hybrid AF function has been introduced, and the E-M1 does away with the optical viewfinder by offering an eye-level electronic viewfinder for the first time. Along with these new features, the EOS 600D also gains in capability. The main highlight is undoubtedly its new AF algorithm for the Intelligent Hybrid AF system. Under the new system, phase detection AF for both the center cross-type and the nine-point system (which is the same as on the EOS 5D Mark III) is available. The 600D further becomes the first EOS camera to offer a variety of special modes such as a Pro Capture mode and the Intelligent Sweep AF, which are all geared toward improved focusing accuracy. Additionally, the EOS 600D is the first EOS camera to offer a built-in flash, so you can quickly shoot the intended images without having to switch off the flash. The digital Fine Art Frame (DFAF) mode is also a very unique feature, which allows you to create a Dynamic Fine Art Filter by using the Live View function. In essence, DFAF is a photo tool that will generate an artistic fine-art-style frame around each individual image.

The EOS 600D is the first EOS camera to offer CMOS AF, allowing you to shoot faster in low-light conditions. The 16.2 megapixel CMOS sensor also benefits from the new Rolling Shutter function, which locks the shutter open when the camera is activated, thereby eliminating camera shake. The EOS 600D's Super High Sensitivity mode is new and allows for high-sensitivity photography under the most challenging conditions. The ISO sensitivity range extends from 50 to 400 (expanded from ISO 50 to ISO 1600 on the EOS 5D Mark III), which is ideal for both still images and movies. The 1.6x crop factor of the 24.3 mm x 36 mm image sensor means that photos shot with the 600D are 1.6x larger on a 35 mm film frame than what can be seen on the camera's 9-point AF screen. The EOS 600D can record movies at up to 1080p high-definition (HD) resolution (25p, 50i, 60i) or 720p HD with SxS picture quality. • Intelligent Hybrid AF eliminates the need to select between one of the nine AF points
