As the novel coronavirus continues to spread around the world, the risk of infection is also rising, according to infectious disease experts. With the world's attention focused on the outbreak, many countries have shut down schools and daycare centers and urged people to avoid public places, such as shopping malls and restaurants. Experts warn this could cause more people to stay at home, which could increase the chances of getting sick. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) on Sunday said there are now more than in all the other countries put together. ADVERTISEMENT "We are clearly hearing how people really love the library," Nina Holton, director of health for Los Angeles County, told the LA Times Sunday. "And I think that's just what we want. We want to protect the public." People who catch it have few or no symptoms and can carry it for days or even weeks, according to the CDC. While the majority of people who get COVID-19 have no symptoms, many are experiencing fever, cough and shortness of breath. Symptoms can appear from two to 14 days after exposure. The World Health Organization have a people who detected in the control of the specific proposed with the companient of the specific proposed with the control of the control of the specific proposed with the control of the control
