Field of the Invention This invention relates to a print data output method and a print data output apparatus, and more particularly to a print data output method and a print data output apparatus for outputting formatted print data, etc., based on a recording instruction inputted by a host apparatus or user's computer, which makes it possible to output print data by letting the formatted print data flow through a message service in case the formatted print data is outputted by the host apparatus. 2. Description of the Related Art Print data output apparatuses such as a printer, a copier, a facsimile apparatus or a multi function apparatus have been provided with various functions such as a sending/receiving function of an e-mail, a mail box, a network, etc., so that a user is allowed to print data sent from various sources with a simple operation of specifying a destination of print data, and then to output the print data from the apparatus after the print data has been converted into the print data format. Therefore, various types of functions are employed in the conventional print data output apparatuses, and the data formats include a bit map data, a PostScript, a PDF (Portable Document Format), and a JBIG (Joint Bi-level Image Encoding Group) data. The data format of the print data is specified by a recording instruction given to the print data output apparatus by a user or a host apparatus. In case a print data output apparatus is equipped with a screen displaying function, the data format of the print data displayed on the screen is, for example, a bit map data format in case the print data is one of the bit map data formats. Further, there are cases where print data displayed on a screen is converted into a print data format different from the bit map data, such as a PostScript, a PDF or a JBIG data format. If, in the conventional technique, the print data is specified to be converted into the print data format different from the bit map data or the print data format other than the bit map data, the conventional print data output apparatus is required to have a function to change the print data format for outputting print data. Therefore, there has been a problem that a structure or a process of such a function
