Enjoy the superior combat mechanics and perma-death persistence of DEARLYNE. Dearest is a dark, light, and gothic JRPG that will break your heart, amuse you, and make you cry. "Why the hell am I doing this?" Dearest is a first-person adventure game with touchscreen controls where you take the role of a young girl who has just learned of her fate. Immerse yourself in a dark world where with your partner-in-crime you must change your fate. The game is reminiscent of the old Nintendo time-killing games like Whack-a-Mole and Pocket Monster where you have an arcade game style visual and sound mix. "It's different. It's... Ugh, I don't want to talk about it!" THE FEATURES:- Classic turn-based battles with one or two other characters from the world of Dearest.- Local co-op with other players in all the same areas of the game.- A side-scrolling Zelda-style adventure with dungeons, puzzles, and over 40 weapons.- A gothic style atmosphere with a creepy theme.- An anime cut-scene feature where you can see the story of the game unfold before your eyes.- A PC/PlayStation(R) Vita version is coming in the future! "What the fuck did I get myself into? I'm so screwed!" Dearest is currently in beta on both PC and PS(R)Vita. More content is coming as we near the release of Dearest. The rest of the game will be in English, but please note that there will be some strings of Japanese and Korean in the game's text. You can select Japanese or Korean language at the initial setup. - AyeYou!Dearest is a DualShock(R)4 exclusive game released for PlayStation(R)Vita. Unleash your inner demon! Enjoy the latest Version of AyeYou!DEARLYNE on the PSP(R)Vita! See for yourself with the brand new DualShock(R)4 Controller. Note: Every DualShock(R)4 comes with a full controller case, a cleaner cloth and a dual A/B USB cable. Also note: This release is for the PSP(R)Vita not the new console. User comments: Ana P. What's new in Carpet Bombing:

Taking On Climate Change Earlier this month, New York City and Boston kicked off a series of discussions about how to help residents reduce their carbon emissions. The meetings were part of the climate advocacy initiative Cities for Climate Protection, which focuses on helping cities create sustainable development programs and programs to reduce carbon emissions. The organization was founded in 2007. "The world is rapidly approaching a point where cities will be an important part of developing new solutions to the carbon emissions crisis," Patricia Doese, the founding director of Cities for Climate Protection, said in a statement. "Increasingly Americans, much like people the world over, are looking to cities for answers about how to solve problems related to energy, food, water, and climate change. Right now in the U.S. there are plenty of cities that are doing just that." Cities are confronting a variety of issues related to climate change, as illustrated by this country's most modern metropolis, New York City. The Big Apple, also the world's most populous city with almost 8.8 million residents, has seen increased lawsuits related to climate change and sea-level rise and other issues caused by climate change. Seattle has also undergone a rise of complaints from constituents who are upset about Seattle's climate. And while cities like New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, and Washington, D.C. have some history of responsive and proactive climate change policies, those urban areas lag behind other American cities when it comes to decarbonizing. City residents often notice more extreme weather conditions, like high heat, record-breaking storms, and drought. Last year, the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality concluded that Portland's heating systems are causing the city to experience nearly every one of the natural battles of the 21st century—extreme heat, storms, droughts, floods, disease and sea level rise. No other country has urbanized the way the U.S. has. Its cities have ballooned to the size of small countries. Back in 2000, Americans city dwellers accounted for just 24 percent of the population. But by 2015, urban residents made up 61.3 percent of the population, and 74 percent of that urban population lived in America's biggest cities. "Even within a narrow window of time
