Hi I would like to know how I can pass the argument to my Parametrized constructor from a method with function pointer. I tried this but it didn't work: class Test { private: function *callback; public: Test(int i, int j) { callback = &Test::callback; } void callback(int i, int j) { return; } Test(int i, int j) { callback = &Test::callback; } void callback(int i, int j) { Test t(i, j); return; } }; int main(void) { Test t(1, 2); return 0; } Any help would be really appreciated. Thank you! A: A function pointer can't be a direct argument in a constructor. But it can be passed indirectly to a function where you can set the function pointer there. class Test { // ^^^^^^^ - either directly use //private: void (Test::*callback)(int, int); function callback; // member variable // 6d1f23a050
