Hi I made a space shooter in Unity and I want to change the speed of my bullets in an area the player has been moved to. In other games this would be very simple. In other games it would change the speed of the bullet. I don't want it to look like the bullet is moving in 2D only it would be the bullet going in the 3D space. I want to change the speed based on the location of the player in the 3D space. I made a function where I put the difference in player position to the bullet in the form of a 3D vector2 and then based on the vector2 I would change the bullet velocity to something like r*velocity Is that solution viable? And if so what should I change when the player shoots? A: The reason why this works is because if you look at the relationship of a 3d transform's position 6d1f23a050
