Stephanie Austin, chief executive of the Walkers Shortfall Group, said: "People in Wales are becoming increasingly unstuck as the UK as a whole has been seeing a significant drop in the number of people in work. The self-employed and people who have not been in work in the past now have to find out who pays for their healthcare and how they will pay their house. "In 2016 there were 70,000 additional people in Wales who were not looking for a job but on the searches they made, the number of people looking for work was up by 127,000." It is the latest stark warning of how millions of people are having to weather the economic storms that are sending waves of unemployment crashing across the UK. Latest official figures show that there are more than 1.8 million more people looking for a job in the UK than there are jobs to go around. The Welsh Labour Government said that the statistics were an "unacceptable" indictment on the recovery being created in Wales. Wales has a lower unemployment rate than the UK average of 5.2%, but a total of 35,000 more people are out of work compared with last year. Ms Austin said: "The Welsh Government and the Welsh Chamber of Commerce are working together to support people and business here. Their work with local councils on the Just Plan scheme aims to connect
