Scania Truck Driving Simulator 150 Product KeyThe Internet is a rapidly growing segment of the global information infrastructure. According to a recent study, the number of Internet users in the United States is approaching 200 million. There are almost 500 million Internet users in the world, and it is predicted that there will be over 900 million Internet users in 1999. In the same period, the global market for Internet and intranet services will grow from $39 billion to $65 billion. The Internet infrastructure, however, is not effectively leveraging the enormous opportunity to interconnect people and data. Most Internet users cannot access the Internet because they are not connected to an Internet Service Provider (ISP). Local area networks, including enterprise networks, and the public switched telephone network (PSTN) currently provide the only access to the Internet. This is because the Internet is based on the concept of Internet Protocol (IP), which defines communication between computers across any distance and through any network. Consequently, the Internet does not operate on a particular geographical or logical topology and, therefore, it does not operate based on what is most efficient or most economical in terms of c6a93da74d
